Spots in New York were steady, but once during the day futures were weak, and Liverpool arrivals were flat and offering lower at the close. In our market orders that it was desirable to fill at once, when an upward movement showed itself, being generally e-mpleted, we had a moderate demand at unchanged prices, and a steady market. The New York Bulletin, of Monday, reported; 'On contracts there was another upward turn, with a pretty active market, and some little excitement alliday, with the 'bulls' claiming an additional growth to their borns of quite a decided character. The stimulus for improvement was obtained through the higher and stronger advices from Liverpool, which frightened the 'sports' into free covering, and induced a number of purchases for investment with a pretty general feeling of contidence as compared with the opening of the week."
